o at Niegara Falls. drifting over Kusgara Falls. We glean the llowing particulars of this melancholy occur-

"On Tuesday evening about half-past nine o'clock, three men having come down the Niagara river in a scow, got into a skiff alongside, and it is supposed they fell asleep, when the boat was separated from the scow, and was hurried with fearful radidity towards the falls. Two of the men, one named Andrew Hanaman, the other a stranger, were hurled at once over the foaming sheet; the third, Joseph Avery, caught hold of a stump in his fearful passage, and had clung to it ustil he was discovered there the next morning. Beats were immediately sent out to rescue him from his perilous situation, but were instantly swamped in the rapids. Meanwhile, crowds of strangers and a great number of citizens thronged to the banks, and the most painful excitement prevailed."

The Buffalo Commercial, of the 20th instant, thus continues the details from one o'clock of

Wednesday:

"The man was in a part of the rapids where the rocks rise nearly to the surface of the water. A log of wood, apparently wedged tightly between the rocks, and crossed by another still higher out of the water, was his resting-place. Here he remained; half clinging to and half perching upon the log, from which he would occasionally slip down and walk a little on the rocks, which were only a short distance under water. A few feet in advance was a small fall of about four or five feet, and here, and on each side of him, the waters rushed wildly on at a speed of about forty miles an hour. About half-past two o'clock in the afternoon a raft was constructed, formed of crossed timbers strongly fastened in a square ferm, a hogshead being placed in the centre. The raft was strongly secured with ropes on each side, and was floated down to the rocks upon which Avery was stationed. As it approached the spot where he stood the rope got fast in the rocks, and the raft became immovable. Avery then appeared to muster strength and courage, and descending from the log walked over the rocks to the place where the rope had caught, and labored long and where the rope had caught, and labored long and hard to disengage it from the rocks. After some time he succeeded, and then, with renewed energy, inspired by the hope of success, he pulled manfully at the rope until he succeeded in bringing the raft from the current towards his fearful resting-place.

"Avery now got on to the raft, making himself fast thereto by means of ropes which had been placed there for that purpose, and those on the land commenced drawing it towards the shore. It had approached within thirty feet of one of the small islands, towards which its course was directed, when suddenly it became stationary in the midst of the rapids, the ropes having again caught in the rocks. All endeavors to move it were found to be in vain, and much fear was entertained that the strain upon the ropes might break them and occasion the poor fellow's loss. Various suggestions were now volunteered, and several attempts were made to reach him. One man went out in a boat as far as he dared to venture, and asked him if he would fasten a rope ture, and asked him if he would fasten a rope round his body and trust to being drawn in by that. The poor fellow, however, shook his head despondingly, as though he felt that he had not despondingly, as though he felt that he had strongth enough remaining to make himself secure to a rope. At length a boat was got ready—a life-boat, which had arrived from Buffalo—and was launched. Seeing the preparations, Avery unloosed his fastenings, with the intention of being ready to spring into the boat. Borne on by the rushing waters, and amid the breathless suspense of the spectators, the boat approached the raft. A thrill ran through the crowd—the boat lived in the party waves it struck the raft—i shout in the angry waves—it struck the raft—a shout of joy rang forth from the shores, for it was be-lieved that he was saved—when suddenly the hope that had been raised was again destroyed— a moment's confusion followed the collision, and a moment's confusion followed the collision, and in the next the victim was seen in the midst of the waters, separated from his frail support and struggling for life. For a moment or two the poor fellow, striking out boldly, swam strongly towards the island, and the cry echoed from shore to shore that he would yet be saved. But soon the fact became certain that he receded from the shore—his strength was evidently failing. Gradually he was borne back into the fiercest part of the current—slowly at first, then more rapidly. Swiftly and more swiftly he approached the brink of the fatal precipice—the waters had him at last, their undisputed victim, and madly they whirled him on to death, as though enraged at his persevering efforts to escape their fury. A sickening feeling came over the spectators when, just on the brink of the precipice, the doomed man sprung up from the waters—clear from their surface—raising himself upright as a statue, with his arms raising himself upright as a statue, with his arms flung wildly aloft, and with a piercing shriek that rang loudly above the mocking roar of the cataract, fell back into the foaming waves, and was hurled over the brow of the fatal precipice!

"We have no heart for comment upon the me-lancholy and awful event. The fate of poor Av-ery will add another to the many fearful local in-cidents already related by the guides at the Falls, and for years his critical situation, his hard strug-gles, his fearful death, will be the theme of many a harrowing tale. And visitors to the mighty cata-ract will seek the scene of the terrible catastrophe with a shuddering curiosity, and the timid and the ract will seek the scene of the terrible catastrophe with a shuddering curiosity, and the timid and the imaginative will fancy, in the dusk of the evening, that they still hear above the waters roar the fearful shriek that preceded the fatal plunge."

The Albarty Atlas, speaking of the case of poor

Avery, remarks:

"The scene itself was appalling-of this man "The scene itself was appalling—of this man hanging between life and death, on the edge of that vast precipice of headlong waters. But it receives an additional poignancy when, by the mysterious agency of the telegraph, the whole public, within the radius of a thousand miles, are made to participate in his agony. The spectators on the shores who beheld his struggles were hardly more present at the scene than the men who, in the distant cities, were told from hour to hour, and from minute to minute, of his peril, and the

and from minute to minute, of his peril, and the alternate chances of death and escape." The Rochester Democrat says that Avery was young man twenty years of age, and that his dis tracted father was among the spectators. The boat, which was made fast to the log, and the raft, are still swaying to and fro in the current. None of the bodies have been found, and probably never will

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.—On Sunday afternoon, about three o'clock, Mr. James Skiles, clerk in the store of A. S. Henderson, esq., of Salisbury township, and a horse of Mr. Murray, were instantly killed by lightning, under the following circumstances: Mr. Skiles started on foot in the circumstances: Mr. Skiles started on foot in the afternoon for his father's residence, which was a distance of about a mile from the White Horse tavern. On the road he met Mr. Murray, who, distance of about a limit from the travern. On the road he met Mr. Murray, who, with his family, were scatted in a carriage. Something about the harness being out of order, Mr. Skiles volunteered to avrange it. He had just finished it, and was about proceeding on his way, when he and Mr. Murray's horse were struck dead. The occupants of the carriage were unhurt.—Lancaster (Pa.) Whig.

MARYLAND TOBACCO CROP .- Fine rains which

Maryland Tobacco Crop.—Fine rains which have prevailed in Prince George's county have somewhat revived the hopes of the tobacco growers, though it is yet thought not more than half a crop can be secured. The Marlboro' Gazette says:

"In this neighborhood the rain was fully sufficient to enable planters who had tobacco plants to set them out. The number of those who were so fortunate as to have them was comparatively few—and we reiterate the opinion that, under the most favorable growing weather, we do not anticipate that more than half the usual quantity of this article can be brought to the house. We learn that the copious rains of Monday and yesterday morning did not extend more than five or six miles below this village, in the direction of Nottingham, and that in all or most of that fertile region there has been but a small quantity of to-bacco planted."

"The Russians have entered Jaset," say the last advices from Europe. Well, where and what is Jasey?

Take up the map of Europe, and anugly ensconsed among a range of mountains, a little to the westward of the river Pruth, in the northernmost province of Turkey, the city in question may be found. Jassy is the capital of the Turkish province of Moldavia. It contains from 30,000 to 40,000 inhabitants, but is not a place of much

The inhabitants of this city were never very in timately connected with the Turkish empire, and owing the Sultan a merely nominal subjection, it is probable they would be little disposed to oppose the Russians. Indeed, as the Czar has made the protection of the Greek Church the ostens cause of the dominions of the Porte, the inhabitants of both Moldavia and Wallachia, all disci-

cause of the dominions of the Porte, the inhabitants of both Moldavia and Wallachia, all disciples of that particular faith, may be ready to join rather than oppose him.

These two provinces, Moldavia and Wallachia, are all that mmain to Turkey of its conquests north of the Danube. Bessarabia, between the Pruth and the Black Sea, north of the Danube, was ceded to Russia some time ago. Moldavia lies between Transylvania and the Pruth, and is bounded south by Wallachia, and touches the Danube only between the mouths of the Screth and Pruth. It contains about half a million of inhabitants on about 15,000 square miles. Wallachia lies south of Moldavia and southeast of Transylvania, in the great bend of the Danube. It contains 28,000 square miles and nearly a million of inhabitants, Moldavia is situated on the southern or upper verge of this extended plain. Both these provinces raise an immense amount of wheat. The inhabitants give no attention to manufactures, but receive their necessary articles in exchange for their wheat, which is carried down the Danube to the Black Sea, and thence scattered over the west of Europe. To England the trade of these provinces is very valuable. The cloths of Manchester, the hardware of Birmingham, and the cutlery of Sheffield, are found in all the cottages of Moldavia and Wallachia, while more of their wheat reaches England than comes from America.—New York Express, 21st.

A Franklin Monument.—We don't care where

A FRANKLIN MONUMENT.—We don't care when A FRANKLIN MONUMENT.—We don't care where the movement originates, but we should like to see a plain and unpretending monument, built by the contributions of printers alone, reared to the memory of Benjamin Franklin. We wish it might be done, and the printers of the Republican office every one of whom "earns his bread by the sweat of his brow," will back up these wishes with a contribution of twenty-five dollars.

[Springfield Republican.

Franklin was printer, author, statesman, philocopher, and patriot, and the spect of earth, where sopher, and patriot, and the spot of earth where his ashes rest should be adorned by the united contributions of his countrymen. "A plain and unpretending monument" should mark the spot where he reposes; but it should be beautiful in its simplicity, and an extended green expanse should form the background of the scene. A single dollar from each of his fellow-craftsmen would be a sufficient contribution from them. Let them but begin the work. The printers of Philadelphia should at once secure the privilege of purchasing the grounds for the purpose.

THE QUESTION OF WAR IN THE EAST .- The Boston Courier of the 21st instant says:

Boston Courier of the 21st instant says:

"War has already begun in the East. The Russian armies have invaded the Danubian provinces of Turkey, and the Czar lias put forth a justification of this movement in an arrogant and insulting manifesto. We say the war has begun, although some of the European journalists and American letter-writers continue to talk of a peaceable settlement of the matter. There may be a peace at the end of the war, but there is no peace now. When a nation invades the territory of a neighbor without its consent, that is war; no clearer explanation can be given of the meaning of the word; and war is none the less war because some men sit in their chimney corners and call it by a different name. The question therefore now is, net whether there will be war between Russia and Turkey, but when and how it will end. The Czar may continue the march of his armies as far as Constantinople, and say he means no war by it. There would be no more inconsistency in this than in what he is now doing."

of going to press, serious fears are entertained that Mr. John Price Wetherill, who for several days past has been dangerously ill with dysentery, cannot survive till morning. Should these melancholy anticipations be realized—we earnestly hope they may not be—Philadelphia will have to mourn one of her most valuable citizens; a man who has mixed largely for the last quarter of a century in public affairs, to which he has given the most zealous and disinterested attention; and who has, in all things, been eminently liberal and charitable. The loss of Mr. Wetherill would be severely felt both by the community of which he has so long been a distinguished member, and that large circle of friends to whom he is endeared by his private worth and social excellencies.

Aubrey, the well-known western trader, left Santa Fesome time during last December, with a flock of sheep of near 5,000 and a number of mule teams. He travelled down the Rio Grande some distance, went around through the State of Sonora, crossed the Colorado at the mouth of the Gila, and lost but twenty-five sheep and one mule, and that mule was shot by the Indians for food. LOCAL MATTERS.

THE EXAMINATIONS OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS of this city closed on Thursday, and it must be confessed that the trustees have had an arduous duty to perform, and in which they have done credit to themselves, notwithstanding they receive no pecuniary compensation whatever for their im portant services.

The examinations commenced on the seven eenth of May last. Four afternoons a week vere devoted to this purpose, or about thirty-five days in all. There are equal to thirty-sever chools, district and primary, with as many teach rs, and upwards of twenty-five hundred scholars The number would be greater were there accommodations for all the applicants for admission to the privileges of the common schools.

The last one examined was the Third District School, under the direct superintendence of Mr Fill, as principal, and Mr. Goldsmith, assistant Including junior and senior classes, there are about one hundred pupils. It is generally admitted that this school is one of the best in the city, both as to discipline and to the branches taught. Among these are algebra, mechanical powers, arithmetic history, grammar, surveying, and draughting with the lighter but equally useful accomplish nents of pencil drawings and construction o maps, many beautiful specimens of which were exhibited during the examination and for which the Mechanics' Metropolitan Institute, at the late exhibition, awarded first-class diplomas to six of seven pupils of this school.

The visiting trustees took the examination en tirely out of the hands of the teachers and at tended to it themselves. They had the satisfac tion of hearing prompt and correct replies to the various questions propounded to the pupils.

All persons present, among whom we noticed his honor the Mayor of Washington, appeared to be highly gratified at the results of the examina tion, and pleased with a very pretty dialogue spoken by two brothers, (pupils.) An appropriate address by Mr. Randolph, one of the trus ees, in which he complimented the teachers and incouraged the scholars to assiduously devote hemselves to the pursuit of knowledge and virtue closed the exercises of the occasion.

THE CAPITOL EXTENSION .- We noticed but two or three bricklayers at work yesterday, the others being on a strike for higher pay. A million of bricks, or more, are now on the premises, supplied by Byington and Company under the old, and by C. Wendell and Company under the new con-tract. Under the extensive shedding near by (on New Jersey avenue) between eighty and ninety stonecutters are busily employed on the white marble for the edifice. In the basement of the south wing of the Capitol there is a stationary team-engine, and on the first floor of the no wing a portable one, both intended to move machinery for hoisting building materials and for mixing mortar.

"THE STRIKE" among the bricklayers still con tinues. On Thursday night both the employers and the journeymen held meetings; the first named at Klomann's, the last at the Perseverance engine house. A committee of conference was appointed by each, and messages were interchanged between the two bodies, without coming to any conclusion whatever. The employers had proposed, as a pasis of compromise, a classification of hands, to receive respectively $2 50, $2 25, $2 00, $1 75. ane $1 50 a day, according to qualification. To this the journeymen refused to accede, being still determined not to work for less than twenty-five cents a day upon the present prices. So the emoloyers resolved to suspend all work on and after MILITARY .- The new military company recent y formed on the Island has been named the "Naional Guard." James A. Tait, a commissioned officer of the National Grays, and the adjutant of the regiment of the District of Columbia, has been elected captain, and accepted the honor thus endered. The corps have adopted the army infantry uniform, and will make their first parade on the 12th of September next.

The "President's Mounted Guard," the newly organized cavalry corps, talk of doing likewise.

It is in contemplation to order out the entire District, in celebration of the anniversary of the battle of North Point; and, together with the two new companies, there will be nine in the parade There is much soldierly spirit prevalent among our citizens, but it is not of that character which would provoke a war merely for the gratification of a fight. The governing principle seems to be "in time of peace prepare for war," although there is not an entire absence of civic pride in the military movements.

TO AMERICAN AUTHORS.

WRITERS of Poetry, Tales, Sketches, Essays, Winters of Scientific Treatises, &c., &c., who feel the want of facilities for publishing their productions in a profitable and satisfactory manner, may receive information of interest to them by addressing the undersigned, and simply enclosing in each letter a postage stamp to be placed on a letter in reply. That mere curiosity may not induce any one to write to the undersigned, he assures all that the information he has to give can be of service to none but persons of the class he addresses—namely, ladies and gentlemen whose writings are meritorious enough for publication, and yet who have not the means, the skill, or the influence to obtain for them promptly the favora

Wholesale Ice Cream Depot—C street, rear of Brown's Hotel

THE SUBSCRIBER, in removing to his new place of business, returns his sincere thanks to his friends and the public for the very liberal patronage extended to him at his Saloon on the Avenue, during his sojodrn in that locality. Having from a press of business, and an increased demand for his famous lee Cream, been compelled to that of the wholesale, he has closed his well-known Saloon, and removed his depot to the above-mentioned street, and in the store formerly occupied by Hatch & Co. as an Oil and Camphice Establishment, where he respectfully informs the public that he will be prepared to furnish them with Creams of all colors, and of the richest flavors, at the shortest notice. He has attached to his depot an Ice Cream Express wagon, in which the article will be sent to any part of the city to moulds of any size, and in any given quantity. Having just received an excellent assortment of moulds from Paris, Dinner Parise, Tea Parties, Halle, Excursions, Pic-nics, Ice Cream Saloons, &c., &c., served in a superior style and with despatch.

N. B. Orders left at the office attached to his Depot, or with the driver of the Express-wagon, (which will hereafter be designated with a flag of "RED, WHTE, and BLUE,") will receive prompt attention.
